Market Square

The walk begins here. For almost 200 years Poles and Jews shared the history of Krościenko. In 1942 the German occupiers murdered 256 Jewish residents of the town.

Jewish cemetery and memorial

When the project began in 2018, only two matzevot were still standing in the cemetery. Today there is a memorial bearing 256 names and a verse from the Book of Job. The foundation searches for gravestones that were taken away and returns them, like the matzevah of Liba, which came back after 80 years, recovered from a floor.
